COMMENT and RUMOR-

Most of us were surprised with the announcement Wednesday that Wendell Willkie had withdrawn from the Presidential race, owing to his defeat in the Wisconsin primaries. His frankness, it appears, was too great for the stand-pat Republicans, who do not want a man at the head of affairs to whom they have no control.

The Ocean Beach News is now on sale Friday morning to Monday at the Cache of Sweets, 5019 Newport ave. Formerly our newspaper has been on counter sale at the Ocean Beach News office, 1922 Bacon st., only, and by subscription through the U. S. mails. There has been a demand for the News during the time our office was closed Saturday noon to Monday, so we are pleased to accommodate the public in this matter.

Like the shortage of Kleenex and like brands of tissue some items in the printers line have been very limited and difficult to secure. This week we have received some of the scarce items, wedding announcements, shipping tags, window envelopes, 6½ in. standard size envelopes, etc.

It has been difficult to get into the News this week all the items, stories and ads., that we should like to print, so some considered not so essential as others have necessarily been left out. We do our best to give service but cannot always do the things we should like.

Camp Lockett Horses To Be Sold Tomorrow

The growing number of horse enthusiasts in San Diego county will have an unusual opportunity to take their pick of 300 cavalry-trained horses next Saturday at Camp Lockett.

The auction is being conducted by the U. S. Treasury department, Procurement division, to sell the horses formerly used at Camp Lockett by the cavalry stationed there, which has now been changed to mechanized units.

Most of the horses are geldings, with some mares. Several trained jumpers will be sold.

Included will be some work horses and many very gentle saddle horses. According to Major Kern H. Copeland of Camp Lockett, all are well trained and in first class condition, an average of seven years old.

Horsemen of San Diego county who have inspected the horses to be sold agree that the auction presents a rare opportunity to buy many fine mounts.

Prospective buyers will be informed as to height, weight, age and any known defects of each animal, this data being taken from army records.

Each horse will be sold individually to the highest bidder.

Camp Lockett is located at Campo, California, about 50 miles from San Diego. Persons intending to attend may go by way of either Highway 80 or Highway 94. The auction will begin at 11 a.m.

County Leaders Pay Tribute To Judge Jacob Weinberger

Tributes paid Superior Court Judge Jacob Weinberger at the time of his induction on the bench by fellow judges, members of the bar and his host of friends, are recalled with announcement of a list of sponsors for his candidacy to succeed himself in the May 16 election.

These sponsors, representing all walks of life in San Diego, include George A. Scott, R. King Kauffman, Elmer F. Whitworth, Neil Nettleship, Claude Woolman, Dr. Frank J. Perkins, Walter Barnes, Elmer O. Busenburg, Dr. W. W. Crawford, Philip F. Bartlett, Frank Gibaldi. Rev. Howard Bard, Orton E. Darnell, Armistead Carter.

Also Thomas Hamilton, Nicholas J. Martin, Vesta C. Muehleisen, Hal G. Hotchkiss, William T. Johnson, Kenneth G. Bitter, Mildred L. Hale, Sam S. Porter, Mary L. Fay, and Eddy Orcutt.

Labor leaders, management executies, educators, attorneys, clergymen, and others prominent in San Diego's civic, business and professional activities are among those who are publicly supporting Judge Weinberger's candidacy.

Qualifications of Judge Weinberger for the Superior court bench were summarized during the induction ceremonies by a colleague, Superior Judge L. N. Turrentine — then presiding judge of the Superior court — when Judge Weinberger took office Jan. 6, 1943. He said:

"When the announcement of your appointment was made, as I talked with lawyers and others in the community I seemed to sense a feeling of peaceful and safe security in that you had been chosen to be one of the judges of this community. There seemed to be an abiding conviction that they could safely place their matters in your hands and feel at the conclusion of a trial that you had given them a full, fair and intelligent and impartial hearing."

Speaking for fellow attorneys, Clarence Harden, himself a former Superior court judge, addressed himself to Judge Weinberger at the ceremonies: "You have spent over a quarter of a century at our bar. Your long experience and excellent record make you highly deserving of the honor bestowed upon you. We know you will be on the bench what you have always been at the bar always approachable, always diligent, always fair and square."

John T. Holt, attorney, in another tribute, on the same occasion described Judge Weinberger as an "arbiter in a profession that breeds fighters, a peacemaker in a calling fraught with quarrelling. He has sympathy, patience and understanding."

And Orton Darnall, with whom Judge Weinberger served for many years on the Board of Education, pointed to his "constructive thinking, his earnest endeavor to approach intricate, difficult problems in the spirit of a fair and just solution, without prejudice and partiality."

Chamber Commerce April Meet Monday

Ocean Beach Chamber of Commerce will meet next Monday evening at 8 p.m. in the log cabin, corner Saratoga and Sunset Cliffs blvd. Much important business may be transacted as there are civic matters of importance to work for at this time. One of these is the relinquishment of the recreation center at the Davis bldg. by the city recreation dept., and equal in importance is the building of a jetty at the channel of Mission bay. If the proper effort is put forth $100,000 is now available for this project but if allowed to lapse, half will revert to the State Park commission and the balance will stay in the city treasury, where it is being safely hoarded by the watchful eye of city officials who are unwilling to give the beach district the recognition to which it is entitled.

Padre Ball Club Starts Play Saturday

The San Diego Padres will open the 1944 season of the Pacific Coast league with Oakland, Saturday, April 8th at 3 p.m. There will be a brief program consisting of flag raising ceremonies, starting at 2:30 p.m., in which bands, players of both clubs and military and civil officials will take part.

The Oakland club, under new ownership, and colorful Dolph Camilli, former major league player for many years and with Brooklyn last year, as manager.

The San Diego Padres will start the season with probably eight of last years players in lineup. Probable lineup: Frank Dasso pitching and Del Ballinger catching, Walter Lowe on first, George Morgan second, Jack Calvey shortstop, and Eddie Wheeler third base. In the outfield, Jack Whipple in right, Hal Patchett in center, and Nay Hernandez in left.

During 1944 season all games will be night games, starting at 8 p.m., except Saturdays, Sundays and holidays. Saturday games starting at 3 p.m. and Sunday and holiday double-headers at 1:30 p.m.

Urged to Use New Phone Book

New telephone directories are now being distributed by the Southern California Telephone Co., which will complete delivery as promptly as possible despite the current manpower shortage, according to A. V. Engel, telephone company manager.

Engel urged telephone users to use the new directory, which comes with a green cover, instead of the old gray-covered book, because of the numerous changes and additions in the last year. Thus, the manager said, calls to wrong numbers and to numbers that are no longer working will be reduced and customers will be repaid in faster service.

Maj. Everett H. Vaughn, 32-year-old commander of a marine fighter unit, whose wife, Shirley, resides at 4845 Narragansett ave., became the title-holder when he landed his Corsair fighter at Roi airdrome in the Marshalls, a dispatch from the Central Pacific headquarters reported.

Army, marine and navy ground troops holding the air field, cheered Vaughn's arrival, the dispatch said, because until his coming, they had received little fighter protection and were subject to frequent assault from the air by Japanese. Vaughn's unit landed soon after navy Seabees had put the field in shape.

Vaughn was the second marine pilot to land at Roi, having been preceded by a pilot operating a bomber. While marine aircraft have landed on other Jap bases conquered in the war, the landings at Roi were the first territory held as possessions by Japan before 1941.

Mrs. Vaughn, the former Shirley June Freeman, of La Jolla, hears from her husband each week, receiving letters, she says, "in bunches." Tuesday a letter contained a ring, made from part of a Zero, for their two-year-old son, Edward Everett Vaughan.

The Red Cross In Ocean Beach

By ONA E. PITCOCK

On Thursday, March 4th, at the San Diego Women's club, the Chaplains Service Corps presided to honor 50 chaplains from Camps Callan, Elliott, Pendleton, the Navy hospital and training stations. More than 100 attended. Mrs. Oberhellman attended to represent the Ocean Beach Red Cross center. She reported a very interesting and instructive meeting. She was asked to stand and Mrs. Fred Payne, chairman of the Chaplains Service Corps, explained that she represented the center from which most of the altar cloths were made. Our last altar cloths went to San Clemente and now we are making a large one to be used Easter at the Navy hospital. The year that the Chaplains Service Corps has been organized they have provided hundreds of altar cloths, vestments and communion outfits to groups of all denominations. Anyone having linens or tablecloths to donate please call your center, B-5639.

Last week one of our boys home on sick leave tried to get a doll buggy for his little girl who was very sick. He was unable to find one any where. He had visited all the charitable institutions but to no avail. He was telling his story up at camp and hospital and a corps driver who overheard the conversation slipped away and when she returned Leona May was the proud owner of a brand new doll buggy. The happiness of this child was worth many times the price of the buggy. This is only one of the many things done by Red Cross women.

One boy whose hands are badly burned could not even read because he could not turn the pages but someone donated a bed table and now he can have his book on his bed and his buddies turn the pages so he is happier. This boy is badly burned and we sent him a special box and flowers this cookie day.

We want to thank again all the ladies who so generously give of their time to make delicious cookies. Mrs. Bernice Larson sent the birthday box this time. It was decorated as a birthday box and contained besides the lovely cup cakes, candles and napkins, a birthday card. The boy who has the birthday that day gets ice cream and he and his friends have a treat.

Many beautiful flowers were sent in yesterday. All who have calla lilies that they will donate to the Navy hospital and Balboa Park hospital for Easter please call B-5639. These lilies are to decorate the chapels.

Have you forgotten the boys in rehabilition want belt buckles and leather? These boys are cripples because they defended our shores and it is our place now to help them. Save the buckles from old suits and if your old purse is leather they can use that, also old leather jackets.

We have utility bags that must be made at once. These do not have the apron top, just plain bags with the draw-string. Please call for these as it is a hurry-up call.

It only costs 6¼ cents to go to the marine base surgical dressing room where your services are so badly needed. Forget your routine way of keeping house this year and help our boys to get this horrible war finished and come home.

Sacajawea Girl Scouts and the Ocean Beach elementary school children are helping to get calla lilies to headquarters at 4769 Del Monte on Friday.

A letter received by one of our workers, Mrs Bernice Larson, from her cousin who is a nurse serving with our forces in southern Italy contained an interesting paragraph about the services of the Red Cross at the front as follows: "We have a very nice Red Cross in our city and enlisted boys spend a great deal of time there. They have all sorts of entertainment and serve coffee and doughnuts. They also come to our hospital and make rounds and have a place down on first floor where the walking patients may go." This shows that the Red Cross is truly at his side.

Local Jetty Live Subject But Officials Slow To Act

The subject of building a jetty at the south side, and later possibly another to the north, of the Mission bay outlet channel comes almost daily to this newspaper. However, for sufficient lack of interest by Walter W. Cooper, city manager, Fred W. Simpson, first district councilman, and others at city hall, no action that will start construction appears eminent.

Several years ago the State Park commission set aside $50,000 to be matched by another $50,000 to be put up by the city of San Diego. It appears the latter has been most negligent in wanting this work to go ahead, possibly because certain officials have no interest here. We are sure IF Mr. Simpson showed the proper enthusiasm he could have the support of Councilman DeGraff Austin of the second district, the honorable mayor, Harley Knox, and several others, in bringing this worthwhile project to a successful conclusion.

Victor Yarros Speaker at Kiwanis

Past president Clarence Swenson of Ocean Beach Kiwanis club was program chairman Tuesday evening with his speaker Victor Yarros, prominent writer and traveler, as guest speaker.

Mr. Yarros talked about Russia, our powerful ally of the north, which country he has visited on three different occasions and became quite friendly with many of the peasants there. Russia, he said, has a people who are greatly different than those of America, Great Britain or Germany. The series of miracles which has happened to bring these people to their present strength is marvelous to those who have known them intimidly. The speaker said the average Russian is kindly, gentle, considerate, and not ruthless as often pictured by those who do not know them.

Eighty-five per cent are peasants, hospitable, gifted and sagacious, showing deep thought and wisdom in their living. They are frank and honest too. If they do not like a certain person or policy, they do not hesitate in saying so.

Yarros believes Russia will not attempt to socialize the world. While believing in the socialistic order they have learned other countries like different systems, so they will be content to let each country live under whatever system best suits them.

In this war, we all want security. Russia was willing to fight when Italy over-ran Ethiopia and also when Czecho-Slovakia was plundered by the Nazis. Their leaders had vision enough to see that such actions, if unchecked, would lead to the present world war. So it was France and England who failed in that emergency and not the League of Nations covenant. If the powerful European countries had supported league doctrines in the beginning, the present struggle would have been put down at that time. We must have a universal organization in the world for peace, and this organization, Yarros thought, must enforce international law and order.

In closing the speaker said Russia's terms to Finland, Rumania and the Balkans were most reasonable, considering especially the security desired by this great nation, after the present conflict.

Corporal Frank McElwee, home from Camp Gruber, Okla., was a guest of his father.

Ocean Beach U. S. O. Entertainment Program

The Ocean Beach U.S.O. senior and canteen hostesses held a meeting Monday night, April 3; Mrs. Grace Greeson presiding as chairman, at which additional entertainments and improvements in the work being carried on were planned and will be put into effect in the near future. A formal spring dance will be held Saturday evening, April 15th, a navy orchestra furnishing the music.

The Wednesday night bingo games are drawing large crowds: Friday night sandwiches will be added to the refreshments; Saturday and Sunday afternoon checkroom for swimmers has been opened for the summer; a Sunday night buffet supper folowing. Don't forget that serving over 3000 servicemen requires a great many cookies, doughnuts and cold meat for the buffet supper. Each one can help by bringing in any of these items in the refreshment line.

TONIGHT--- Good Friday Service

The Point Loma Methodist church will hold a Good Friday service at 7:30 p.m.

The choir will sing an anthem, "The Message of the Cross."

Rev. James F. Roberts, pastor, will speak on the subject: "The Message of the Cross."

Mr. Jerry Sullivan, talented baritone soloist with the First Congregational church choir will be guest soloist and will sing "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord."

Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Beach Property Owners Should Camp at City Hall

According to the daily press of Wednesday Ocean Beach has been deprived of its juvenile recreation center. From interested local citiens it is reported that the city playground director, Bud Kearns, refused to consider a $5 per month increase in rent, so others were able to secure the building.

Councilman Fred W. Simpson is said to have submitted plans to the council of drawings of a proposed new recreation center and asked for $1500 appropriation for this purpose. City Manager Walter W. Cooper claimed he had not been advised of the situation and had not seen the plans. Others claim Cooper knows all about the loss of the recreation building as well as plans for improvement at the beach here but that he is not in sympathy with the projects and therefore action is forestalled from time to time and years go by with no construction of consequence being done.

Ocean Beach is entitled to far greater attention than it gets from city hall and owners of large property holdings should be on hand at every council meeting with requests and petitions until they get the action they desire.

George Williams Sells His Cafe

George's cafe, 5027 Newport ave., was sold this week by George Williams to Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Wilson of San Diego. The new owners have had many years in the business and hope to continue the satisfactory trade that George has established.

Williams has been in business here five years and appreciates the patronage and support of many local friends. Mrs. Amy Ballard, waitress, will continue with the new owners. George's hobby has been photography and he has shown considerable ability in scenic reproductions. He states that he intends to move to Julian for a rest and will perhaps build a business in scenic post cards and scenes of San Diego's famous beaches and mountain country.

$3500 Contributed For Red Cross Here

According to Mrs. Morris Fried, area chairman of solicitations for American Red Cross war fund, $3,500 has been raised and sent in from the beach district. This is the largest quota ever attained in this area and goes to show the keen interest maintained in this mercy organization during war times.

The money contributions are only a small part of what the people of Ocean Beach are doing for the Red Cross and for the boys who receive their contributions. All sorts of hospital and convalescent clothes are made for the men. Cookies by the scores of dozens, together with flowers and greeting cards are sent almost daily in goodly quantities to Navy hospital and nearby camps.

AGRICULTURE:

Food Supply

Civilian food supplies during 1944 should be the same as last year with farmers continuing record breaking performances, War Food Administrator Marvin Jones said, but stocks of milk, cheese and fats may be slightly less.

At the end of 1943, the U. S. had the largest livestock inventory in history, Jones said, with 19 per cent more hogs and 3 per cent more cattle, although sheep and lamb numbers were down 4 per cent.

With farmers urged to cultivate 16,000,000 more acres than last year, they still face manpower problems, Jones related. The outlook for production of farm machinery and fertilizer have improved, he added.

Revealing $350,000,000 was spent for supporting farm prices in 1943, Jones said they served the double purpose of offering incentive for production and holding down consumer costs.

Postwar Outlook

Addressing the National Association of Mutual Insurance companies in Chicago, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard declared postwar America's exportable surplus of farm commodities would be 15 per cent of production.

Asserting the figure resulted after estimating increased domestic demand for consumption and industry, Wickard said: "Again we are either going to have to extend credit or give agricultural products to other nations, or we are going to have to accept goods and services in exchange."

Advances in agricultural production will pose a major problem in postwar America, Wickard said, remarking that with only moderate demand and usual educational methods, yields will jump up 40 per cent in six years.

WAGES:

Peg Sticks

Testifying before the senate banking committee considering extension of rice control after June 30, War Labor Board Chairman William H. Davis declared that the WLB intended to stand by its "Little Steel formula" limiting wage increases to 15 per cent over January 1941, levels, but only if living costs remain relatively stabilized.

To assure such stabilization, Davis recommended continuance of consumer subsidies. Prohibition of subsidies would result in appreciable rises in basic commodities and make present wages inadequate, Davis said.

Davis opposed suggestions that wages be limited, declaring such action would work against promotions and upgradings, and discourage shifts to industry.

WORLD RELIEF:

Authorize UNRRA

By overwhelming vote, congress put itself on record for participating in world relief by authorizing expenditures of $1,350,000,000 for the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation administration to help the people of occupied countries get back on their feet following their liberation.

Although UNRRA will feed, clothe and restore essential services in the stricken countries, it will do so only for the purpose of getting the people started in rebuilding their agricultural and industrial economy.

Matching the U. S. contribution, 43 other United Nations will put about $650,000,000.

PACIFIC:

Japs Invade India

While Adm. Louis Mountbatten's Southeast Asia command coped with a strong Jap drive into eastern Burma, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's staff concentrated on weakening the enemy's hold on New Guinea with heavy aerial attacks against shipping and gun positions.

Springing unnoticed from the jungle, a Jap force pressing far inland into India pointed at Imphal, key to the communications line feeding Lieut. Gen. Joseph Stilwell's Chinese-American troops opening a new supply route to China in northeastern Burma. While the Allies maneuvered to weather this charge, two other Jap columns aimed at Imphal farther to the north.

In New Guinea, Allied planes ripped the northeastern coastal shipping route while Aussie and U. S. doughboys advanced northward toward the big base of Madang over craggy foothills.

EUROPE:

Take Over Balkans

Germany made her final preparations for an anticipated double-barreled attack against the continent by the Allies by integrating Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria into the Nazi war machine to provide a common pool of men and resources.

The Nazis' incorporation of the Balkans came as the Russ drew closer to the Hungarian border by stabbing deeper into prewar Poland and surged onward to the Rumanian boundary by chewing off Germany's last grip in the Ukraine.

As Germany moved to utilize the Hungarian, Rumanian and Bulgarian armies of over a half million men and draw upon the agricultural and industrial resources of these countries, Nazi troops streamed eastward to take up the fight along the newly organized battlefront.

desperately in the hilly country to dominate the heights from which he could pour his deadly artillery fire upon Allied troops maneuvering below.

In the west, the Allies sent fleets of bombers against France and Germany to rip defenses and railways over which troops and supplies could be shuttled and blast factories turning out Axis armament.

Washington Digest

'Price Premium' Battle Grows in Importance

War Food Administration Faces Increasingly Difficult Problem of Getting 'Bashful' Beef Cattle to Market.

By BAUKHAGE
News Analyst and Commentator.

WNU Service, Union Trust Building, Washington, D. C.

The fight over subsidies—pardon me, I shouldn't use that word subsidies, the New Deal doesn't like it—the fight over "price premiums" on farm products is once more the chief concern of the administration and the members of congress who do not see eye to eye on this painful question.

The smoke of the battle over the veto of the subsidy ban included in the Commodity Credit corporation bill has settled, and since then there was another veto (the tax bill) that didn't fare so well. But the Farm Bloc members are not so overoptimistic as to believe that the President and congress are still far enough apart on the subsidy question that another veto could not be sustained. In the senate, the cooler heads of the opposition know this and are not willing to go through the same futile process again.

In the house, it is a different matter although this is not likely to change the final picture. House Leader Joe Martin, while conceding no jot or tittle to the administration that he can withhold, has made it plain that price control is necessary, and he isn't going to allow too much delay on the part of those who want an anti-subsidy rider attached to the OPA bill. He has other plans of his own.

War Food administration officials are quoted as admitting that the case of the bashful beeves is one of their greatest problems. Concretely, they have the job of enticing two or three million head of beef cattle off the ranges and into the butcher shops during early spring and summer. And the only thing that they know of to make the cattle move is the good "old reliable" that makes the mare go—cash money. Since the administration is sitting on the ceilings and refusing to allow prices to the consumer to go up, Uncle Sam will probably have to make up the difference again, if congress will let him, in the form of a "price premium" to the stockmen.

The Banker's Stake

And the government is wondering about something else besides a few meatless Mondays or Tuesdays or Wednesdays. It is worried about the banker who has a stake in steaks, as well as the cattleman and beefeater.

Cattle on the ranges have increased beyond the feed on the ranges.

The average livestock population of America in the years 1922 to 1942 was 69 million head. Roughly let's say half of this was dairy cattle. Now the estimate is 82 million head and the ratio of eating cows to milking cows has increased alarmingly in the last few years.

And the beeves are now home on the range because there isn't a price incentive to lure them to slaughter. The government feared this; feared first the famine and then the flood. It now looks as if the famine was coming and the flood is not far behind. And this is where the banker comes knocking at the door. He remembers other gluts when the drouth, for instance, sent all the cattle to market at once, ruining the industry, making the banker's notes just so much wallpaper.

But how, the simple citizen asks, can there be a price drop when the government has placed a floor under prices as well as a ceiling over them? Well, see what happened to our friend, the hog. The farmer brought his pigs to market. The government fixed the price which the packers were bound to pay. But so many pigs arrived that the packer couldn't pack them and the law didn't say he had to buy what he couldn't use. So the farmer, rather than pick up his pigs and carry them home again, sold them off at disgracefully low prices to the smart boys. Finally the smart boys got the floor price, the butcher got his ceiling price which the consumers with full pocketbooks and empty stomachs were glad to pay. All the farmer got was mad.

This happened why? The government says simply because some farmers, seeing as how there was going to be such a good market for hogs, exceeded their quotas—got too hoggish (one district in Iowa, I was told, increased its pig crop by 53 per cent, when the figure the government had set was 15 per cent). More about that later.

And so the War Food administration is afraid the same thing might happen to the cattle market. And the banker is afraid. It would be bad enough if we ran into a glut like the hog-jam but, as one WFA livestock expert put it, "we shudder to think what might happen if an early drouth developed. There would be a great stampede to move cattle to market. Transportation and processing facilities might not be able to handle the movement. The result might be the loss of thousands and thousands of head of cattle."

R. M. Evans, member of the Federal Reserve board for agriculture, who is a former agricultural adjustment administrator, is urging the bankers in the cattle industry to do their share in coaxing Ferdinand off the range.

About 'Elastic' Prices

Of course, the cattlemen have been among the most violent critics of the price control administration and their representatives have maintained a steady battle here in Washington in an effort to remove the ceiling prices from beef (or, as they say, make the prices elastic) so that prices would rise and fall in accordance with the seasonal demand.

The cattlemen's viewpoint as presented by Joe G. Montague of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers association, boils down his plaint to a simple statement.

"Cattle just provide the frames to hang beef on. The Lord knows we've produced the frames but somebody fell down on the job of hanging the beef on 'em."

Mr. Montague told me the other day that the weights have gone down faster than even he expected although he predicted the glut and the promised famine ever since the fixed price was made last October. They have gone off 27 to 28 pounds a head and he expects this will continue until July when grass feeding begins again.

"I'm trying to get the cattle off the ranches but I can't do it. The feed lots are not taking them because there isn't any feed. I could sell thousands of pounds of feed today if I could get my hands on it. The government reports show that there's a lot of feed somewhere but we can't find it."

Hoarded Corn

There is plenty of feed in the shape of corn in the country but the farmers with their government-assured prices on hogs are hoarding it—they are transforming it into pork. The government "asked for this" when it put a premium on hog-raising, as we have explained. But many farmers, poultry and dairy farmers and others outside the corn belt need feed.

Not only farmers but industrialists who need corn for their chemicals, are complaining. The army and navy who need their products have echoed their pleas.

So the government is smack up against the problem of prying this feed (corn) loose from the farmers who are keeping it to feed to their hogs. The only way they can shake the kernels loose is to increase the price of corn. The only way they can do that without breaking through price ceilings is to subsidize corn—in other words, buy it at a price which will make it more profitable to the farmer to sell it than to feed it to his hogs.

Montague's argument is that because the cattle business is seasonal you have to have flexibility in price. If the price is nailed down, the cattleman will sell his grass-fed cattle in September, instead of holding out for higher prices in the spring, and save going through the anguish of zero weather. Of course, under price control, the theory is that the flexibility is provided by the subsidy—excuse me again—by the government offering a price premium which gives the cattleman enough for a fair profit but doesn't increase the price to the consumer and start inflation. But the cattlemen don't want sub-price premiums. They want prices to rise and fall in the good old-fashioned way.

And that is where the issues in the fight over the proposed amendment to the OPA bill are neatly joined.

Nitrogen From Canada Sold in U. S. Below TVA and Army Price

By BARROW LYONS
WNU Staff Correspondent

(This is one of a series of exclusive articles on the current fertilizer situation.)

There has been much criticism of the price at which the army ordnance plants and Tennessee Valley authority are disposing of ammonium nitrate for fertilizer—$50 per ton f.o.b. plant.

Nitrogen produced by the Canadian Department of Munitions and Supply is being transported, some of it more than 3,000 miles from Calgary, Alberta, and is delivered in the United States at from $46.29 to $50 a ton. The Canadians say they are not selling below cost--subsidizing the American farmer — but the freight from Calgary to the southern seaboard on fertilizer ammonium nitrate is between $16 and $20 a ton.

Barrow Lyons

The army ordnance plants began delivery in quantity in November, 1943. For the first three months they sold directly to TVA who contracted with Associated Cooperatives, Inc., set up by a group of farmers' cooperatives, to sell the nitrogen to fertilizer manufacturers at $49 a ton. As of February 1, this year, the army ceased to sell directly to TVA but now sells to the Commodity Credit corporation, which, in turn, sells to the cooperative. The price has been raised to $50 a ton to allow a dollar for freight equalization.

Clue to Cost

The Tennessee Valley authority has given one clue as to the cost of the fertilizer. On November 7, 1943, at hearings before a subcommittee of the house committee on appropriations, a table was submitted which showed that the cost of limed ammonium nitrate manufactured in TVA plants was $37.82, exclusive of administrative and depreciation charges.

In another table TVA showed that it expected to show net cash income before depreciation of $246,000 in fiscal 1944 on the production of fertilizer and war chemicals despite inclusion of an expense of $900,000 for research work. Apparently the entire cost of research is being charged for budget purposes as a current expense on all chemical operations. In 1943 a loss of $612,000 was shown, and a loss of $336,000 for 1945 is estimated.

There has been much difficulty in dealing with the army, which is not set up to do ordinary commercial business. It prefers to sell to a government corporation rather than directly to commercial concerns. Its ordnance plants were built in the emergency to assure ample nitrogen production for explosives, but the operating capacity was found to be far greater than needed—hence nitrogen has become available for fertilizer.

The construction of army ordnance plants has created a problem in disposal of the plants after the war. Some in the fertilizer industry believe that the nitrogen producing capacity of the country after the war will be far in excess of requirements for peacetime industrial purposes and agriculture, and advocate scrapping some of the army nitrogen plants after the war.

In fact, the newest plant—the cactus ordnance plant near Etten, Texas—already has been converted to production of other products, and the nitrogen equipment dismantled. Efforts are now being made to sell this nitrogen producing equipment to Egyptian interests.

It is pointed out that in 1939 industry consumed 230,000 tons of nitrogen, while agriculture used 400,000 tons—a total of 630,000 tons.

700,000-Ton Capacity

The present capacity of government is 700,000 tons of nitrogen a year, and the capacity of private plants amounts to 500,000 tons—a total of 1,200,000 tons a year—almost twice as much as was used before the war.

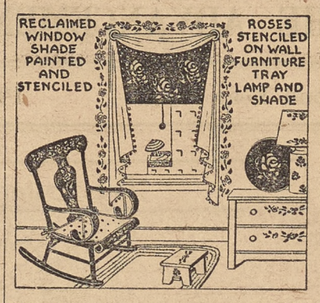
But this year some 675,000 tons of nitrogen will be used in agriculture alone, and fertilizer use is increasing. Purdue university agronomists recently calculated that if the state of Indiana alone were to use as much nitrogen in fertilizer as it should, 178,000 tons would be consumed, against the 6,523 tons consumed in 1941. This may seem fantastic, but it indicates that there is a considerable future for the fertilizer industry; and that the 1,200,000 tons of plant capacity in the United States may not be too great, if farmers wake up to the possibilities of the most efficient use of fertilizer.

Agronomists also point out that when the proper use of fertilizer becomes more general, farmers who live near the large markets will produce more abundantly; and that this may tend to take part of the market from those who are further from the centers of greatest consumption.

Also, as the good land is cultivated more intensively, the cost of farming marginal land will become increasingly less profitable. This may mean a more rapid conversion of marginal lands into pastures and wood lots, with possible shifting of population in some areas.

ON THE HOME FRONT

With RUTH WYETH SPEARS



YOU can make a bower of a city apartment as well as a country cottage by using paint and stencils. The most unpromising assortment of junk furniture and shabby odds and ends may blossom with roses. Here, an old rocker of no particular period was painted blue and then stenciled in the Boston rocker manner. The streaked old window shade and an old tin tray were also painted blue and then stenciled with pink roses.

A vine design of pink rambler roses was stenciled on the cream colored walls around the windows. The lamp base shown in the sketch was made from an old milk can. This can as well as an old paper parchment lamp shade, a chest of drawers and a footstool were painted cream color and then stenciled with smaller roses.

GOLF BALLS: About 400 tons of balata, the tough gum used to cover golf balls, has been released by the War Production board. It is showing signs of deterioration and is unsuitable for war purposes. Manufacturers of golf balls say that they do not have materials for centers on hand and not much for windings, so the balata does not mean any new balls in the immediate future.

BOWLING: Fewer perfect scores were bowled this season than for a good while back, the American Bowling Congress reports. In 1940 there were 284 perfect games in ABC sanctioned competition, the all-time high. In 1942 the score dropped to 225, and in 1943 it slumped to 137. This season there were only 84 perfect games, although 1,675 more teams were accredited.

Should Build Recreation Place At Once

The city's delinquency in allowing the Davis building to be sold or leased to others after being used for a recreation center in Ocean Beach for the past seven years is to be regretted, however, there is nothing to do about it but find another spot where youth, teen-agers and other recreation-minded can seek an outlet for their surplus energy.

Councilman Fred W. Simpson's action in presenting plans to the council this week that would build a city playground at the foot of Newport st. is to be encouraged. Local groups who are working for youth betterment should watch progress of this project and help it along wherever possible.

Unfortunately, this problem is apparently not causing enough concern where it should be the greatest—that is, among parents. This is not to say that many, if not most parents are concerned with their children's welfare. But too many are not.

Not long ago a policeman took into custody a half dozen boys and girls of teen age who were out at a late hour. When he telephoned their parents he found that five out of six of them weren't interested. What is more, four of them told him in no uncertain terms that they didn't appreciate being awakened by the telephone at a late hour.

It has been said that there are no delinquent children—just delinquent parents. J. Edgar Hoover, head of the FBI declared, "Juvenile crime flourishes where the home ties have been weakened by divorce, separation, the desertion of a parent or the ignorance, carelessness or indifference of fathers and mothers."

Youngsters are naturally imaginative. The desire for excitement and adventure is by no means unusual. These normal urges should not be smothered, but should be dealt with sympathetically, understandingly. The need for such handling is all the more necessary at the present time when tales of thrilling war adventures fill them with the yearning to share actively in these experiences.

Boys and girls naturally seek each other's companionship. This companionship should be provided against the background of the home rather than found wherever chance might produce it.

No one thing can be termed a cure-all for juvenile delinquency. But certain it is that when more parents devote more time to understanding and helping their children there will be less of it.

Easter Greetings to All.

Our report on the East card collection shows that when we want to do things we can and have at least 300 very pretty Easter cards. Miss Jean Orrick of sector K contributed 20 candy filled Easter favors. However a number of blocks were missing from our report and we are looking forward to hearing from them in the future with other contributions, such as laprobes, slippers, games, books, etc.

Fourteen laprobes and a few pairs of slippers have been turned in and the need for more is ever increasing, and all who can help in the making of these are urgently requested to do so.

Our local monthly meeting will be held on Monday, April 10th, at 1:30 p.m. at the Assembly of God hall, Ebers and Cape May. Our guest speaker for this meeting will be Mrs. Lydia K. Gray, of the San Diego association for family living, and it is urgently requested that we have a good attendance. Block leaders are requested to ask all those who can possibly attend.

A number of crossword puzzles (mounted on cardboard not larger than 4" x 6" with the answer on the back) have been turned in and we can use many more. This is a pasteing job the youngsters can do, make them feel that they can help too. This seems but such a small item, but nonetheless it is greatly appreciated.

OCEAN BEACH SCHOOL NEWS

The total sale of war stamps and bonds for the four weeks of March was $319.00. Sales have fallen off the last few weeks—perhaps it's spring in the air or the thought of Easter and new clothes.

* * *

The fourth grade children of room 9 have decided that perhaps ceiling prices and rationing are quite all right. These children are studying the history of California and have ready about the prices of commodities during the days of the Forty-Niners.

Then, as now, prices soared because of the scarcity and the difficulty of transportation. Flour cost $1 a pound, vinegar and molasses were $5 a gallon, and Oregon apples were $1 each; even a good sided onion would bring $1. Sugar, coffee, and potatoes were sold at $1 per pound—when there was any on hand. Eggs once sold for $36 a dozen; the "bargain" price of eggs was $6.

Wages, rents, and all other fees were proportionately high. Hostlers got $100 a month for caring for the horses of the stage coaches and drivers drew $250 a month. The rent for a coach barn was $200 a month. Doctors asked $16 for a visit and a visit plus medicine was $50. Most of the mining camp doctors practiced without benefit of regular training.

Lumber soared to the incredible price of $100 a foot and there was no F.H.A. Shipping was $1000 a ton from San Francisco to Sacramento, and all prices were paid in advance.

And the ideas of fun and relaxation and the prices paid were just as fantastic. Miners would hike miles, if there was no other transportation available, to see a race between bullfrogs or to witness a bull and grizzly bear fight. Sometimes the gate receipts exceeded $10,000.

From the exhibition of bear versus bull came the current names used on the New York Stock Exchange.

Some of the miners struck it rich enough to stand the prices but most of them gradually drifted into other activities or headed "back home."

Good Friday and Easter

The week has been a busy one for the pastors of our community who have been busy with Holy Week services and preparations for Easter. Beginning with Palm Sunday, then Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, the obedience of Christ, God's Invitation and the Saviour's suffering, are brought to Maundy Thursday when the "Last Supper" is celebrated and the King of Kings is on His knees washing the feet of His disciples.

Today, April 7, is Good Friday, and to those who attend service in their church we are taught that God is speaking to each one through the Cross of Christ. If we are sincere we find the lesson shows us just what we are like. Tomorrow, is Easter eve, a time when our faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.

Easter morn should find each one in the church of his choice being made firm in the belief that Christ was born that we might be born again and died that we might die in selfishness and He rises that we might rise to a new life.

O Cross that liftest up my head,
I dare not ask to fly from thee;
I lay in dust life's glory dead,
And from the ground there blossoms red
Life that shall endless be.

Make Happiness Your Aim On Easter Day

Our Neighbor The Church

There's something about a Church.
It's presence calms my mind
And sets my soul at rest,
A neighbor rare in kind,
There's something about a Church!

Ask your neighbor what he wishes most of all and very probably he will answer, "Happiness." We are often reminded that this is the universal guest. Books roll off the press telling us how to achieve happiness. There is, however, a deeper desire of the soul and that is for completeness: the fulfilling of all basic need and longing. With completeness comes happiness, not as a sensation, but as an abiding gift of the spirit.

No other institution down through the ages has contributed more towards the completeness of man and hence his happiness than the church. Think back over your own life. What an emptiness there would have been if all those activities . . . religious and social . . . associated with the church had not taken place. Whether we are active members of a church or not, we all look to the church as our friend and neighbor in times of both joy and sorrow. What an empty place our community would be without our church! What a beacon of hope and comfort are our churches during these war-torn days!

So with the coming of Easter, we feel it is particularly fitting that we take time out from our every day affairs to pay tribute to "Our Neighbor the Church."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CHURCHES

"Are Sin, Disease, and Death Real?" will be the subject of the Sunday Lesson-Sermon in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. The Golden Text is from Psalms: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and forget not all his benefits: who forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who redeemeth thy life from destruction."

In a Lesson-Sermon passage from I Kings it is related that the son of the widow of Zarephath "fell sick; and his sickness was so sore, that there was no breath left in him. And she said unto Elijah, What have I to do with thee, O thou man of God? art thou come unto me to call my sin to remembrance, and to slay my son? And he said unto her, Give me thy son. And he took him out of her bosom, and carried him up into a loft, where he abode. . . . And the Lord heard the voice of Elijah; and the soul of the child came into him again, and he revived."

Mary Baker Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures:" "If God heals not the sick, they are not healed, for no lesser power equals the infinite All-power; but God, Truth, Life, Love, does heal the sick through the prayer of the righteous."

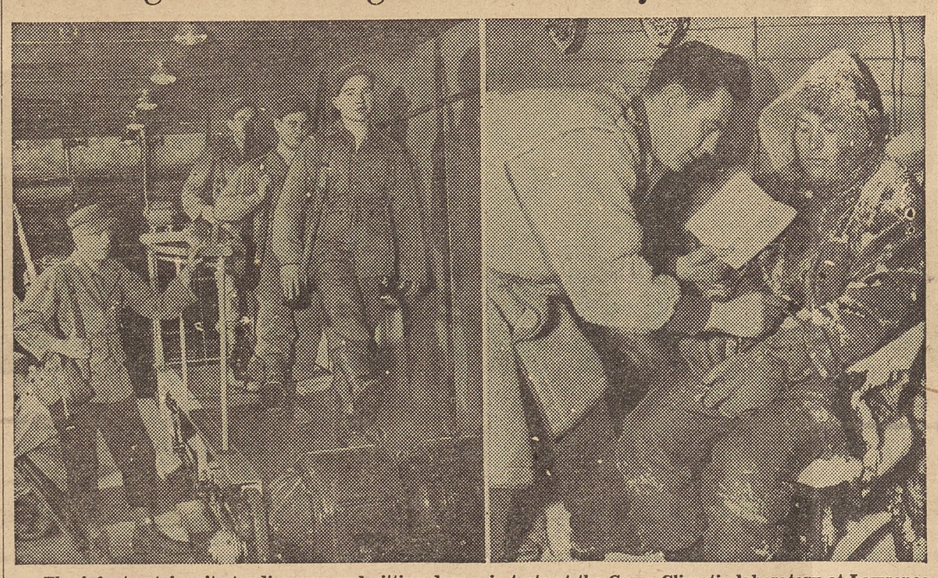
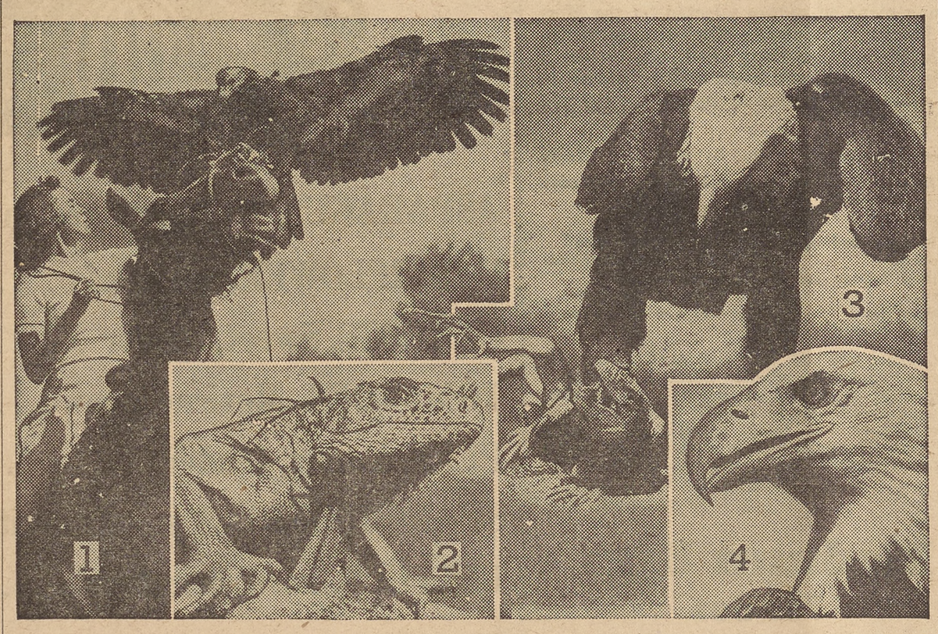
Running Hot, Sitting Cold, at Army Climatic Tests



The infantry takes it standing up—and sitting down—in tests at the Corps Climatic laboratory at Lawrence, Mass. It is here that the quartermaster corps charts reaction of men and checks effectiveness of equipment under simulated tropical and arctic temperatures. Left: Three infantrymen with full packs undergo discomforts of an endless treadmill hike under broiling sun in the jungle chamber of the laboratory. Right: Observer checks clothing and condition of soldier who sits it out in searing 40 below zero frigidity of the cold test room.

Hunting Dragons With an Eagle



Meet a pair of principals in the cast of a new motion picture. Filmed in Mexico, movie stars "Tequila," a golden eagle obtained as a fledgling by Dan and Jule Mannix, well-known naturalists and explorers. (1) "Tequila" alights gracefully on wrist of Jule Mannix. (2) "Tequila's" enemy—the iguana lizard. The reptile is five feet long, with a well-armored back, whip-like tail and is a dangerous foe. (3) Following a furious encounter "Tequila" has pinned his leathery adversary to the ground with a powerful claw to show him who's boss. (4) Closeup of the conqueror "Tequila."

Non-Laying Hen

The comb, face and wattles of the non-laying hen are shrunken, dry and pale. The entire head appears long and beefy, and the eyes are not clear and bright. The low producer is also comparatively inactive and of a wild disposition.

Many Means Available for Saving Fuel in Cooking

Every time a meal is cooked there's a chance to be thrifty with fuel, and here are reminders for kitchen conservation of gas and electricity:

Turn on a surface burner or oven just soon enough so it will preheat by the time food is ready; and use a pan the same size as the burner or unit. Use pans or kettles with straight sides, flat bottoms, and tightly fitting covers as these are most economical of heat.

Bring food to boil on high heat, then turn to low heat, just enough to keep food boiling, and whenever possible turn off electricity and finish cooking on stored heat.

Don't be a lid-lifter or oven-peeper. Learn the approximate time it takes to cook the quantity for family meals, or to bake a particular dish. Lifting and peeping release steam from top-of-stove pans and let heat escape, and plan the oven's work shift. It is thrifty to do several baking jobs in a row. Use the oven to capacity, but do not overcrowd. Vegetables may be steamed when other foods are baking or roasting if a cover is used.

Europe's Postwar Need To Be Large for Livestock

In order to reestablish its agriculture on a sound basis, Europe must have large numbers of livestock after the war though not necessarily of American origin. At present Europe hasn't the needed numbers and will have even less at the end of the war, according to Successful Farming magazine.

The question of who is to provide livestock for the looted pastures and barns is of immediate and vital concern if the responsibility falls upon American livestock producers. If the need is to be filled by other means livestock producers would be spared the effort of accumulating export stock for a nonexistent market, particularly in view of feed shortages.

The article says that to make a market, there must be agreement on value and price, payment in cash or kind must be assured, and the goods must be moved by some means from seller to buyer. A tremendous burden will be placed on merchant tonnage and interior transport in the rebuilding of Europe. Little if any space will be available during the first 18 months of peace for the bulky shipment of livestock, which will probably be low on the priority list.

Cub Scouts Lively Meet

The March meeting of Pack 328 was held at 7:30 Friday, March 31 in the school auditorium.

While the cubmaster met with the boys, the new assistant cubmaster, Rev. Philip Harris, presided at a short business meeting with the parents. The need for Den mothers was stressed and two mothers volunteered, they are Mrs. Bud Jennings and Mrs. L. R. Lyman. This brings the number of dens in the pack to seven.

At 8 the parents rejoined the boys in the auditorium. Following the flag salute and singing of the Cub advancement song, an advancement ceremony was held in which Paul Morton received the Wolf badge of rank and Jack Keck received the Bear badge; Den 1 presented an Indian skit with the Cubs in war paint and feathers. Den 2's skit showed dad playing horseshoes and thinking about the things he liked to do when he was a boy. Den 3 presented Senor Sio, the world's greatest shot, in the shooting gallery at the county fair. The meeting was closed with the grand howl. Surprise guests of the evening were troop 28, their scoutmaster, Ralph Chadwick and Mr. Bingham, who came over from their own meeting to help us out and to enjoy the program.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Lieut. Col. Frank Kurtz, Flying Fortress pilot, tells of that fatal day when the Japs struck in the Philippines. Eight of his men are killed fleeing for shelter and Old 99 was demolished before it could get off the ground. After escaping to Australia, what is left of the squadron flies to Java, where they go out on missions over the Philippines. On one of these missions one of the motors of Kurtz' Fort is hit and they begin to lose altitude. They stay with it, however, make the bomb run and try to make Malang Field on Java, but change their minds, turn back. The boys are wrought up at a U. S. magazine which publishes a complete diagram of the E model Fortress.

CHAPTER XI

"'Pilot to Radio,' calls Captain Skiles over the interphones.

"'Radio answering Pilot. Go ahead,' answers Sergeant Boudria.

"'Get the emergency rations out,' says Skiles, 'and the jungle kits, and set them by the door.'

"They'd given us up at Belem, but when they heard us circling up in the fog they went down the field in a truck, throwing out lighted flare pots to mark the runway. Our gas was so low that before the ship was parked the No. 1 engine cut out.

"Next morning we were off for Natal, and landed there at one o'clock. We were gassing up and the crew chief was supervising the loading—the natives rolling out the steel drums, and the crew chief unscrewing their tops to hurry it up—when he happened to stick his finger into one that seemed a little heavy and, by George, it was full of water! The barrel looked like any other barrel, the native looked like any other native. Of course it was sabotage, but what could you do! Brazil wasn't in the war yet. Somebody hoped that one drum of water would have brought us down with sputtering motors out in the Atlantic.

"We took off for Freetown, Africa, at ten o'clock. It was an eleven-hour flight. We stayed with the British there and got along with them fine. It was a fighter station. They gave us a nice feed and all the warm beer we could drink—it was New Year's Eve.

"Then we started across Africa, and finally sighted the Nile, and I ate dinner at the British sergeants' mess at Khartoum.

"When we got to Iraq," said the Gunner, "we began to smell the war. The British there told us not long ago the natives, led by Nazis, had revolted, and two thousand rebels had tried to take the field away from the little garrison. All the British had on it was one plane, so old it looked like a box kite—cruised about seventy miles per hour.

"So they'd taken an empty gas drum, loaded it up with brace chains rivets, and bolts, and in the middle put a hell of a lot of sticks of dynamite and a fuse. It was so big it would hardly go into the door of the plane.

"Then they flew over the rebel army, and when they had figured the best place to drop it, they lit the fuse. But when they tried to roll it out, it got stuck in the door of the plane. The British said they were quite worried for a bit while that fuse burned on.

"Finally they jammed it through the door and on out, but it exploded about fifty feet off the ground. They said it killed about fifty rebels.

"A couple of hops later we were in Bangalore, in India, where there was a Welsh regiment stationed.

"Then we flew on down to Palembang, Sumatra, and crossed the equator in a hell of a snowstorm at 12,000 feet, with snow packing in between our engines.

"There we first saw the Dutch. Compared with the English, they seemed more rugged. But we liked them, even though they give you a loaf of bread, a hunk of baloney, and a cup of tea and call that breakfast, lunch, or dinner."

"On the seventeenth of January we had reached Java," continued the Gunner, "and were looking down on their rice paddies in a drizzle which washed everything a vivid green. Then we flew over Surabaya and up between those two conical mountains that guard the pass into Malang Field.

"Then we went down to barracks to meet the 19th. Well, there'd been quite a change. As a bunch they looked nervous and hollow-eyed, compared to the way we'd remembered them back in the States. Looked like a few of them had been drinking quite a bit off duty, maybe trying to forget what they'd been through. You had to stop and remember that those poor guys had been fighting a defensive war with those D's.

"They'd look enviously across the field at the tail guns of the new E's we'd arrived in. No doubt it was a lot better combat plane. 'Yeah-auh,' they'd admit, 'but wait till a Jap gets on your tail and then see what happens.' They all looked so tired I wondered what I'd look like after a while.

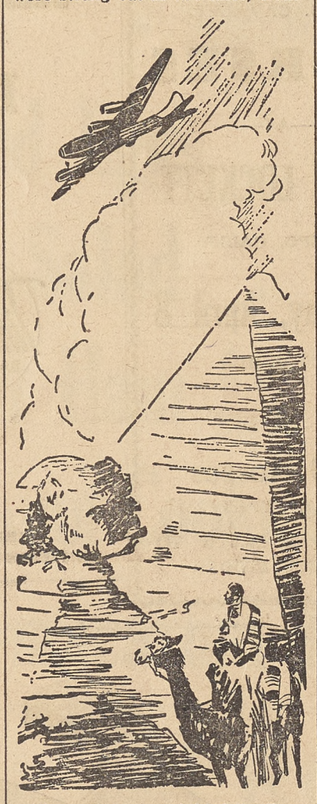
"We found out they were sending us out on a raid the very next morning—which should show how badly they needed us—so after we came back I went out to check again on my guns."

"We needed the new boys badly," said Frank. "We'd got word trouble was on the way. You see the American Navy's PBY's—big flying boats—had come out of Manila, and now were operating off Java, from the big Dutch naval base at Surabaya, but mostly from coastal coves and the wide mouths of rivers. Patrol Wing 10 they were called, and a swell gang they were. Of course we thought it was God-awful stuff they were flying—those clumsy twin-engined boats with the tail sweeping up in the air—but they certainly did a job.

"They came in with the news that on reconnaissance they'd picked up an enormous gang of Jap surface ships, coming toward us down Macassar Strait. It was the same gang we'd pounded at Davao. They had to be stopped. Had to be! So the Colonel sent out everything he had, which was just six Forts, and the Dutch sent their little Navy, which couldn't scare them much alone, plus some old Martin B-10 bombers they'd bought from us before the war."

"Take-off was at 3:30 in the morning," said the Gunner. "We'd planned to bomb from a good altitude, but the weather was so bad that we had to drop down to 15,000 as we approached the target. It broke light about seven and we began to see the gray, hazy sea, and the mountains piled up on both sides of the Strait below us.

"We were about ten miles from the target when we saw that Jap surface gang. I'm not a Navy man, but I was knocked over by it. They were strung out in two lines, transports with escorts — destroyers, cruisers, battleships riding the flanks, stretching back as far as we could see. I was as bowled over as a ten-year-old kid watching his first Sells-Floto circus parade start by. Only then I thought, 'My God, here we were, only six Forts, with all this power against us!'



The next day we sighted the Pyramids and dropped down to fly behind them.

"When we sighted them we separated into two flights, following radio command, and almost immediately their ack-ack fire opened up on us. We went in in a column of V's, each flight picking its ship, and by the time we were over them, the Japs had their antiaircraft fuses just right. Just after we'd dropped our bombs, the Jap pursuits hit us. I'd been watching them spiraling up from their aircraft carrier — in flights of three, keeping formation as they spiraled, fifteen Zeros in all.

"When they'd got their altitude, they paired off.

"Each pair would pick a Fort and go in for the attack, one hitting it from the side while the other would come in from behind. Remember, it was the first time any Zero had ever seen an E-model Flying Fortress. The one who came in from behind would throttle down to our speed and, in a leisurely way, try to shoot the tail off.

"It happened a couple came nosing up around our tail the first thing. Just like the boys of the 19th had said, they first opened up with their four little .25-caliber wing guns, getting everything nicely lined up with their tracers before cutting loose with their cannon.

"Well, our tail gunner, Sergeant Irvin Schier, waited, letting them come on in. Then just as they were about to uncork their cannon, he let them have it—knocked hell out of them. If they hadn't been dead they'd have been terribly surprised.

"We'd finished our bomb run, so then we headed for a cloud. But Major Robinson, the leader, came back with his flight for a second pass, and picked off another transport. Then we headed for home. Every Fort got back, and we'd picked off seven Zeros. For days the damned fools kept up those tail attacks, and it was the same old grind—we'd average four Zeros a mission.

"They tell it that one day five Zeros are sitting under a cloud when we come by. Four of them go in for tail attacks and are shot into confetti, so the fifth is smart—he goes home with the news. But for a while there it was a tail-gunner's heaven."

"You never forget your first battle mission," said the Bombardier, "only I of course had a bomb-sight angle on the whole picture.

"Just before we took off Major Robinson called all pilots, bombardiers, radiomen, and navigators into the hangar room for a critique. He had a new idea.

"My plane is to be in his flight. When we make our pass over the target, my navigator is to watch Robinson's bomb doors, and when Robinson's bombs appear, then he releases four of mine, I meanwhile sighting the target. Then the planes behind me release when I do. In this way we'll make a wide pattern, and get away from the target faster than by making a double run.

"We have clear weather, climbing for our altitude through a few scattered clouds, and thirty minutes away from the target we reach 30,000 feet and then level off, following the Borneo shore line of Macassar Strait. We're all at battle stations, I fiddling with my bomb sight. Presently we hear the top turret gunner over the interphone.

"'Planes!' he's calling. 'Formation of planes, right rear, high!' They were coming down at us from 32,000 or 33,000 feet, but from the navigator's compartment I couldn't see them yet.

"Then they peeled off for the attack, concentrating on Robinson's plane. I could hear the gunners calling these plays over the interphones—couldn't see the Zeros myself yet, but I could see their tracers going into the tail of Robinson's plane. Then we turned in on our bomb run, and I'd catch glimpses of the Zeros as they overshot Robinson, some of them coming fifty feet from his plane.

"But I'm busy on my bombing run. I've picked my first live target, a row of three transports, broadside to our line of flight. Everything else seems to be going smoothly. I can hear Charlie Britt on the top turret guns, hammering away at Zeros, and I cuss him a little because it shakes my bomb sight.

"Now we're on the run, coming in on the target, and I've set my drift in the sight, plus our true altitude and true air speed, so I can put those cross hairs on the target.

"Now the pilot and I switch our earphones over to command, so we can listen to any orders Major Robinson wants to give from his lead plane, while the copilot stays on the interphones, so he can pick up what our gunners are doing.

"And in a minute I hear it. Major Robinson is calling.

"'Robinson to Flight. I've been badly hit in the tail—having trouble holding the nose of my plane down. I'm turning the formation.'

"We had been coming in straight at the coast of Borneo. Now, turning, we go down the coast, the Zeros swarming around us like flies around a hunk of rotten meat.

"The first one I really saw came up from beneath us. I'd known he was there, because tracers had been coming up from under the ship's belly past my face, as if someone down under there was throwing up hatfuls of live, smoking coals.

"As he pulls up out from beneath us and banks away, I get in a couple of good bursts at him with the little .30-caliber machine gun we have down there in the nose. I couldn't really see if I'd hit him or not. Then:

"'Robinson to Skiles. Go ahead.'

"'Skiles answering Robinson,' says our pilot.

"'Take the lead,' Robinson tells him. 'I can't keep up with the formation. I'll drop behind. And slow the formation down so I can keep up.'

"We're still going down the coast, remember. And now:

"'Skiles to Robinson. Go ahead,' comes over the interphones.

"'Robinson answering.'

"'Do you want to make another pass at the target?' asks Skiles.

"'Yes, Skiles, take the formation over the target again.'

"We make our turn, the rest following, and head back.

"Just then a Zero dives down on the formation from behind, going between me and the plane on our right wing—about a hundred feet away—and then it levels off out in front of me. I happened to have the gun in the right-hand socket of the nose, so I can really lay it on him with my little .30-caliber sewing machine. It's taking plenty of stitches, but I can see my tracers slapping into his wing, close to where it joins his fuselage. He wobbles, goes into a dive. He is well out in front with plenty of forward speed, so it's almost like watching a bomb leaving my plane, which I can follow all the way down. This doesn't happen often. Usually I shoot at them, they go on back behind, and the wing gunners confirm whether I really got them or not. But now:

"'Robinson to Flight. Use as your target that heavy cruiser moving out from shore.'

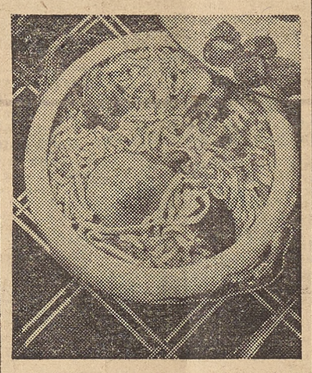
Daily Menus Need Changes to Fit Family's Wants



You'll be surprised at how little chicken is needed for Chicken Noodle Paprika, but how good the casserole can taste. It meets all the requirements for a good, wartime dish.

Do you plan your meals to suit the family's mood?

In spring, for instance, do you satisfy their hunger for foods crisp, crunchy and light? Do you get away from the too hearty and heavy foods of winter and heed the change in weather and appetite? If you don't, then you should! Every family requires a change in food as well as in dress.

Food is more fun for both you and the family if you vary menus from time to time, weed out much-repeated recipes and add new ones to the family's collections. Do keep in mind the changes of season and their wealth of new foods and color schemes to add interest to the diet.

Save Used Fats!

Vegetables herald the important coming of spring—and their use in meals should be more generous, even in the meat course itself where they will act as a meat extender:

Meat Balls in Vegetable Sauce.
(Serves 6 to 8)

½ pound veal
½ pound pork
1 pound beef
1 small onion
1 green pepper
1 carrot
1 stalk celery
2 tablespoons fat
¾ cup applesauce
¾ cup moist bread crumbs
2 teaspoons salt
1 pint tomatoes
1 tablespoon flour
2 eggs
3 potatoes, diced
¼ teaspoon pepper

Chop parboiled or leftover vegetables. Grind meat and mix with applesauce, bread crumbs, salt, pepper and beaten eggs. Form into egg-sized balls. Melt fat, brown meat balls, add chopped vegetables and tomatoes. Bake uncovered 25 minutes in a moderate oven.

Save Used Fats!

Asparagus and Spaghetti.
(Serves 6)

1½ cups spaghetti, broken in pieces
1 pint canned or cooked asparagus and liquid
2 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons fat
1 cup rich milk
3 to 4 drops tabasco sauce
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup buttered bread crumbs
Cheese, if desired

Cook spaghetti in boiling salted water until tender. Drain. Drain the liquid from the asparagus, cut stocks in short pieces and prepare a sauce from the flour, fat, milk and asparagus water, then add the tabasco sauce and salt. In a greased baking dish, place a layer of the cooked spaghetti, then one of asparagus. Cover with sauce and continue until all ingredients are used. Cover top with buttered crumbs. Top with grated cheese, if desired. Bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven until heated, about 20 minutes.

Lynn Says

Mottoes: Produce and preserve, share and play fair are mottoes which should be in every household notebook.

This is what I mean, so check yourself on the following points so that you can tell if you're doing the job on the home front:

Save cans—to meet the quota of 400,000,000 used cans every month.

Save waste paper and collect scrap. Containers are made from these to ship supplies to forces overseas.

Start the Victory Garden early—to produce more food than we did last year.

Store leftover food correctly, prevent waste.

Shop early in the day, early in the week. Accept no goods without stamps.

Substitute for scarce foods, serve simpler meals to save time and leave you more time for vital war work.

Save Used Fats!

You'll be getting the most out of your money if you serve this low-on-chicken casserole. It's thrifty but full of nutrition:

Chicken Noodle Paprika.
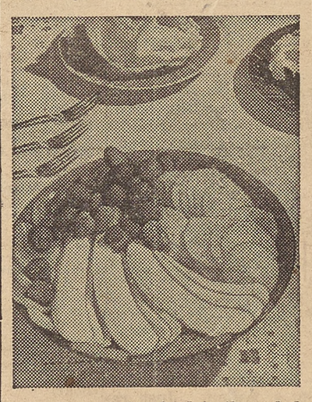
(Serves 6 to 8)

½ pound medium-cut egg noodles
4 cups boiling water
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup diced carrots
¼ cup diced celery
Salt and pepper to taste
¼ cup onion, cut fine
2 tablespoons shortening
1½ cups chicken stock or gravy
1 teaspoon paprika
½ cup minced, cooked chicken

To the boiling water add salt and egg noodles. Cook until all water is absorbed and noodles are tender. This requires about 10 minutes. Stir frequently during cooking period. Combine carrots, celery, onion and shortening and cook for a few minutes. Add chicken stock, paprika, seasonings and chicken. Cook slowly until vegetables are tender. Pour this mixture over the cooked egg noodles, place in buttered casserole and bake ½ hour at 350 degrees. Whole pieces of chicken may be used in place of the minced chicken.



An inexpensive food is the salad, but it provides the mineral and vitamin riches necessary to good health and living, and satisfies the need for change of texture and contrast in menus.

Ham Loaf.
(Serves 6)

1½ cups ham, diced
1 package lemon-flavored gelatin
1 cup boiling water
¼ cup vinegar
¼ teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon salt
¾ cup water
¾ cup mayonnaise
2 tablespoons minced green pepper
2 tablespoons minced dill pickle
1½ teaspoons dry mustard

Pour boiling water over gelatin and stir until dissolved. Add vinegar and water and allow to cool slightly. Add the other ingredients and turn out into loaf pan. Chill until firm. Turn out on platter and garnish with lettuce, endive, sliced eggs and tomatoes.

Save Used Fats!

Vegetables should be cooked until they are just barely tender—then no more. Then most of their vitamins are intact, and the color is glorious. Here's a casserole with a riot of new spring color:

Garden Casserole.
(Serves 6)

2 cups white sauce
1 cup cooked new potatoes
1 cup cooked asparagus, cauliflower or broccoli
½ cup cooked carrots
1 cup cooked peas
½ cup yellow cheese

Make white sauce. Place vegetables in layers in buttered casserole and pour white sauce over them. Cover with finely cut cheese and bake in a moderate (350-degree) oven 20 minutes.

Mr. Carr Found Friends Unsympathetic at Late Hour

The late William J. Carr of the state department had occasion once to call at the house of a friend late at night. He rang the doorbell. After a long wait, a head was poked out of a second-floor window. "Who's there?" asked a voice.

"Mr. Carr," was the reply.

"Well," said the voice as the window banged shut, "what do I care if you missed a car? Why don't you walk, and not wake up people to tell them about it!"

With Writing Mastered, Jake Might Study Reading

Old Uncle Jake had been very much occupied all by himself over in a corner near the fireplace. Armed with a stub of a pencil and a piece of paper, he was industriously scribbling in short, jerky motions. Suddenly he looked up, beaming happily.

"Doggone it, Maw," he exclaimed excitedly, "if I ain't learned to write. Really write!"

Maw got up, ambled over and critically looked at the scrawled lines across the paper.

"What do it say, Paw?" she asked, shaking her head.

"Well, I don't know yet," replied Uncle Jake, puzzled, "I ain't learned to read."

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Odd Ant-Eating Aardvark No. 1 Animal in Dictionary

Principal distinction of the peculiar looking aardvark is that it is the first animal in the dictionary. The animal with the strange combination of two a's in its name is a stout little creature with a pig-like snout, tubular mouth, large ears, long tail, and short muscular limbs. It attains a length of five feet, including the tail.

It is a member of the ant-eater family, but it is the only ant-eater with teeth. Although it feeds on insects, it can go long periods without food.

The female aardvark produces only single births and carries her baby around on her back during its slow growth.

SNAPPY FACTS ABOUT RUBBER

Seriousness of the truck tire shortage will be appreciated when it is known that 34 of the country's largest cities receive all their milk by motor trucks.

Underinflation is a voracious waster of tire rubber. A check on Michigan war workers' cars recently showed that more than 15 per cent were underinflated.

Rubber and processing represent about 40 per cent of the cost of manufacturing a popular size automobile tire.

The first rubber-tired motor bus was operated in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1900. It was used for sightseeing purposes.

Red Cross Drive For Funds Continue

Though several divisions of the 1944 Red Cross War fund campaign have exceeded their assignments in the county-wide drive for $868,000, the greatest fund-raising appeal in Red Cross history will continue into the second week of April, Donald E. Hanson, chairman, reported yesterday.

"Notables among successful divisions were the efforts of the county towns group," he announced. "At last reports this division had oversubscribed its quota, and the total is increasing daily."

The $868,000 total goal for the appeal had not been reached, however, at last reports.

"We still are confident that San Diego county can and will achieve this goal," Hanson asserted. "Appearances that we are lagging are somewhat deceptive, as the San Diego campaign actually did not open until March 20. This delay was planned, for several valid reasons, and we therefore are still within the time limits normally allowed a campaign of htis magnitude."

Hanson urged workers in all sections of San Diego city and county to double and redouble their efforts during the next week, which he characterized as the "most vital and crucial period of the entire campaign. We must not relax our alertness for one moment. We must play fair with the boys over there."
